

wavelength reducing member above a lower temperature limit and cooling at least one of the slot electrode and component parts including the wavelength reducing member below a higher temperature limit; and

4 a process chamber into which the microwave exiting the slot electrode is introduced
2 so that a plasma is generated by the microwave within the process chamber.

See the attached Appendix for the changes made to effect the above claims.